

HW #15

The light from the Sun is refracted and bent towards our eyes from the increase of air temp near Earth's surface. Our brain tricks us into thinking the light is a straight line, which gives us an image of the sky on the ground.